Why You Should Arrive 3 Hours Early

International travel requires additional procedures compared to domestic flights. Here's why early arrival is important:

1. Check-In & Baggage

Even if you check in online, baggage drop lines can take time—especially during peak travel hours.

2. Security & Passport Control

Security at JFK can be busy, and international flights require document verification, which adds extra time.

3. Boarding Process

Boarding for Iberia flights typically begins 45–60 minutes before departure, and gates may close early.

When Should You Arrive Even Earlier?

In some situations, you may want to arrive 3.5 to 4 hours before your flight:

- Traveling during holidays or peak seasons
- Checking multiple bags
- Flying with family or large groups
- Needing special assistance
